VETERANS.

ATTENTION!

Cleveland Ran Inquisition and And Cut Down Your Pension.

Can You Figure Out the Difference Between Parker and Cleveland?

TEACHINGS OF EXPERIENCE.

The similarity of the campaign now being conducted on behalf of Judge Parker to that of 1892 in support of Mr. Cleveland must strike every veteran with apprehension. The same men are at work, with a striking reproduction of the old methods, making the probability approach a certainty that their success will be followed by years of as dire distress to the veterans and their widows as characterized Mr. Cleveland's administration.

Then, it will be remembered, every man and woman who drew a pension was put into sickening fear that it would be taken away, and that fear remained as long as Mr. Cleveland was in office. No matter how deserving a man or woman might be, no matter how much the pensioner had dared and suffered for the country, he could not be sure any minute that some pretext would not be found for taking away his little stipend. Every subterfuge that could be made to avail was employed, and used with merciless cruelty. The subterfuges and pretexts began with the heartless pettifoggery with the terms of the Act of June 27, 1890, which came from no less a source than Mr. Cleveland's cabinet, that devised a wretched quibble, to take away the pensions of tens of thousands, and deny them to hundreds of thousands more. Naturally, all the subordinates hastened to follow the august example. In fact, they were ordered to do so. Besides the machinery of the Interior Department, all that of the great Postoffice Department and the Attorney-General's Department were impressed to aid in the work of pension robbery. The country was covered with an official army of gossip-hunters, scandal-mongers, from whose secret attacks no reputation was safe, and for whose injuries there could be no reparation. For the first time in its history the United States was running an inquisition. Postmasters vied with the extra-salary Special Agents in gathering up neighborhood gossip and forwarding it to the Pension Bureau, where it was treated as conclusive evidence, and the victim denied the right of seeing it, of controverting it, or of even knowing the names of the authors of the scandalous libels on him or her. More than $500,000 was spent every year during Mr. Cleveland's administration in salaries and extra pay to Special Examiners engaged in this iniquitous work, besides $1,000,000 a year to Examining Surgeons, to find reasons for depriving veterans of pensions. Besides this, $6,000,000 worse than squandered in Mr. Cleveland's four years was the diversion of the greater part of the energies of the Post Office and Attorney-General's Departments in aiding the Pension Bureau's fraud-hunt. With all this prodigious effort of the entire Administration the actual discovery of real frauds was astonishingly small. The convictions in any year did not reach 10 per cent. more than the routine results of previous Administrations.

If frauds could not be found, the pension roll must be cut down any way, and honest pensioners made to suffer in lieu of dishonest ones. This evil became so outrageous—its crying injustice so manifest—that Congress had to intervene, with laws making a regularly adjudicated pension a vested right, and prohibiting the Pension Bureau from taking away a pension without giving the pensioner due notice, and allowing him to be heard in his own defense. It is almost incredible that this should have been necessary, and that a pensioner was denied the commonest rights of an American citizen.

Now, do the veterans want to give these men another opportunity for such a riot in injury and injustice?

They must make up their minds to have it, if Mr. Parker is elected. It can not be averted.

In 1892 the Democrats brought the pension issue to the very front, as they have in this campaign. When they were successful they claimed to have received a mandate from the people to apply drastic correctives to the pension system, just as they will claim if they are successful this fall. The only way to prevent their repetition of the widespread cruelties and wrongs of the Cleveland regime is to prevent their getting an opportunity.

We must give Judge Parker at least the credit of frankness. He tells us plainly that he intends, if elected, to at once revoke Order 78, and remand us to the condition we were in before that order came to our relief. He is as frank as Mr. Cleveland was, when he announced his belief that "thousands of communities contain pension frauds," and that he proposed to cut down the pension roll. He did not find the frauds, in spite of his tremendous efforts; but he cut down the pension roll all the same, just as if what he said was true. With the same men behind him, with the same proclamations of hostility, we can and should expect nothing more than a repetition of all that we suffered under Cleveland and Lechen.

The veteran has his choice plainly before him, and no excuse for making a mistake.—National Tribune.

Noted Georgia Humorist.

Prof. Charles Lane, the noted Georgia humorist will lecture at the Opera House November 12th on "Analysis of Laughter." Prof. Lane is not a new figure on the local stage. He has appeared here before and with considerable success. The mission of the humorist is a lovable one. It is to carry smiles into the hearts that require them, to brighten dark spots in the lives of the great public, and to transplace gloom for sunshine. He also lightens domestic cares and makes the worries of business less significant. For this he should be encouraged, his mission should be applauded, and only kind words should be his lot in life. Prof. Lane works his way carefully at first and finding an established foothold, delights his audience with bits of story.
